This quiet windswept town of Fife was the setting for the murder of Clive, an Englishman, in the 17th century. The house stood and is now restored to its 17th-century state. The coast and seashore 3 miles to the east is a delightful scene. Outside the town, the River Tay meanders through the parks and gardens, with views of the Tay Bridge in the distance.

Dundee Castle is a home of the University of Dundee and is the setting for the Dundee Castle Museum, which tells the story of the castle's history and its role in Scottish history.

Dundee Castle Gardens is a large and beautiful garden located in the heart of the city. The garden features a variety of plants and flowers, and also has a children's playground and a cafe.
